Chapter 1 by Arameus

As I stood on the porch and looked out across my front lawn I took a very deep breath of the crisp air. Wow, what a glorious morning, I felt so good, I don't know why.

The sun was just right, warming my skin nicely, not a cloud to be seen anywhere. Breakfast was delicious, at least what little of it there was.

I could see, the people of my neighbourhood slowly commencing the daily commute to work. Denise, my good neighbour on the left looked exhausted, but she smiled in my direction as she drove past.

For a Thursday, it felt like the week was dragging, but no matter. I felt good.

My phone rang twice, and stopped. I looked at it, and thought, if it was an emergency, they will call back. It rang twice again and stopped. Ok.... I thought.

I then felt an unbelievably painful sharp sensation in my head. It was excruciating, I have never ever felt anything like it before. It scared me. Then I noticed that I could hear very low, barely audible sounds.

I looked around, but it was dead quiet. I paused, there it was again...as if I could hear what my neighbours across the street were saying from inside their house.

No, no, this can't be happening, I know I'm not crazy. Then just as I turned to leave, from the corner of my eye I saw two young males, about 24 years old peaking back at me trying to look as if they were just minding their own business.

They looked very out of place, I was about to walk away from me but it was too late, I saw that in the hand of the one on the right, a small object was being sneakily pointed in my direction.

Wow, these guys were sloppy, it was so obvious, or did they want it to look that way?....
